

Senior Financial Analyst
Confidential
Greater Los Angeles

Our client is seeking a Senior Financial Analyst for its balance sheet management. This is an opportunity to be a part of the team that is upgrading their forecasting and modeling to support the organization's ambitious growth efforts. Reporting to the Vice President of Finance, the role will be a member of the financial forecasting and risk team supporting effective balance sheet management, income forecasting, and capital adequacy functions of the credit union. As the Senior Financial Analyst, you will set up and run the quarterly ALM modeling to monitor and control interest rate risk, manage the balance sheet, liquidity, continually assess the process for strengths and weaknesses, and provide recommendations to management to enhance or improve the modeling processes and the decision-making effectiveness of the ALCO.

The role will develop regular and ad-hoc studies and analyses, oversee and develop the formulation of analyses that evaluate the impact to the financial condition and enhance and build new processes and reporting related to the balance sheet metrics. The leader is expected to exercise judgment, challenge, and make recommendations. Given the requirement to exercise "What if..." scenarios, the ideal candidate will demonstrate strong self-management, problem solving, project management, teamwork, and presentation skills. Familiarity with asset/liability modeling, financial institution balance sheets, and strong analytical abilities and documentation experience is required

Successful candidates will have a degree in finance, economics, mathematics, or another quantitative or business discipline and experience that provides the necessary skills and knowledge to satisfactorily perform the essential job functions.
